

LOOK WHO'S TALKING

BY ANN COCHRAN
PHOTOGRAPHY BY JEFFREY PREHN
STYLING BY ANTON PAPICH

SISTER SISTER DC's own hotel heiresses are all grown-up

Look out Tory Burch, another child-of-privilege-turned-fashion-guru is on the rise. Potomac-raised Jennifer Marriott Jackson, great-granddaughter of J.W. Marriott, founder of the famous hotel chain, will open a clothing boutique called Perfect in the Sacramento, California, suburb of Roseville this summer. Turning her bliss into business was natural for Jennifer, who designed her own bridal ensemble when she couldn't find the short style she envisioned for her Park City, Utah, wedding last autumn.

Younger sis Ashley Marriott, a sophomore at Brigham Young University, has equal passion for fashion. Both are still proud of being voted best dressed at Walt Whitman High School and credit their mother Julie with their love of clothes. "One of our favorite places to shop is her closet," says Ashley. "She dressed us well when we were little, and as we got older she wasn't afraid to tell us if we made unflattering choices," says Jen. "She knows what's up." Mom also instilled a serious sense of normalcy; though comparisons to those other hotel sisters are inevitable, the Marriott girls are as well-adjusted as they come. But they do love to shop: Milly clothes, Yanuk jeans and Beverly Feldman shoes for Jen and for Ashley—who was thrilled when DC got its own Intermix—Marc Jacobs and Uggs.

"I'm well aware that Uggs are out now," she admits. "But when you are walking to class in the snow in Utah, I'm sorry—you want your Uggs." ■

HOTS: Locks of Love, Susan G. Komen Breast Cancer Foundation, Lincoln Memorial picnics, Old Glory BBQ, Silver Diner black-and-white milkshakes, Robert Redford, Diane Von Furstenberg (Jen), Mary Kate and Ashley Olsen (Ashley, sheepishly), The Colbert Report (Jen)
NOTS: Two-tone hair, Tom Cruise and Katie Holmes, Shake that Laffy Taffy, Bohemian chic (Jen), Asking a Marriott, "Can you get me a room?"